BUILDING AMONG THE UNREACHED

When responding to the call of missionary in Chad, I never thought that I would need to go through the "buy land and build it myself", which should be the challenge faced by local pastors when building churches. I did not expect that the drawing courses – when I was majoring in the Department of Mechanical Engineering 15 years ago – would come in handy at this time.

I didn't even think that when I was the supervisor of a sanitary equipment factory in Vietnam 10 years ago, the experience of executing many water and electricity installation projects would help me!

In the past year, I had the opportunity to visit the homes of different missionary families in their villages, which allowed me to observe and learn, and to imagine a living model that would suit our family. We have an open front yard that looks through the wire fence to the street and neighbors (and to be seen by them), which helps us be more involved in the culture. The other end is a closed backyard surrounded by walls, giving our home a breathing space, and if we really want privacy, we can find a safe corner (see picture above).

The structure of the house is mainly to reduce the indoor temperature, so a double-layered roof is adopted, and a large amount of airflow can pass through the two-layered roof to achieve the effect of heat dissipation. At the same time, the brick wall is shaded by the extended eaves around it to reduce the heat absorption of the wall. The interior space of the house has windows on at least three sides.

And yet, the design drawing is only on paper. How will it be completed in the end? Even I am looking forward to it!

Our prayer is that the Lord will make this place a launch pad for missions, so that more people can step on this brick and continue to go to the scattered villages of unreached peoples in the north. Ask the Lord to make this place a resting place for missionaries, so that missionaries on the front line have a place to rest.
